The MindSnack Corner

The DreamGiver

Last week we talked about asking life changing questions, to get life changing answers. We discussed how answers that give reasons only bury us in the rubble, and trap us in a prison of irrelevance, while answers that give results provide a new direction for our journey. In this week's 'MindSnack' we will continue talking about lasting change, and the next question that comes to mind: "What is my purpose?" or "What is my dream?" These two questions are really asking the same thing, and that is, "Why am I here?" Mark Twain said, "There are two days in everyone's life that matter more than all the rest: the day we were born, and the day we find out why." Perhaps you've been asking yourself this question. Maybe you have wanted to know, for a long while now, exactly what you are doing here. Our reason for being here is directly linked to what we really and truly want in life. It is our Big Dream! Here is a reality worth remembering: not everyone is going to be pleased when you discover that you were actually born to do great things. Last week, I began reading a book called "The Dream Giver" by Bruce Wilkinson. This is a must read because, although it is only a story, it touches the heart of the dreamer. It is the story of a Nobody named Ordinary, who lived in a place called Familiar. One day the routine of Familiar just isn't good enough anymore because Ordinary realizes that the Dream Giver gave him a dream. He realizes that he is destined to become a Somebody and do great things. It is important that you press on toward your dream. So many people depend on their comfort zones and excuses, and when you leave your comfort zone, you disrupt theirs. They will fight, claw, insult, and even try to defame you. They will go out of their way to try to make you feel worthless, simply because if you succeed, then they no longer have a valid reason as to why they have chosen to do nothing about their own lives. But understand that on the backside of every obstacle is a life changing opportunity! You may never win them over to your side, but the direction you choose to walk is based solely on who you decide to please. Take courage, and know that YOU WERE BORN TO WIN!!
